PILLAR 2 - COMMUNITY INPUT

Do you believe council is actively listening and considering your concerns? Community input and involvement are keys to "Turning A New Page" and caring for the community we love. Unfortunately, constituents highlight a growing disconnect, warning that they feel municipal leaders frequently finalize major planning processes with little to no public consultation, leaving those most affected with no voice in the projects that are shaping their own backyards.

This closed-door approach has troubling local precedents. Notably, an investigation by the Ontario Ombudsman (April 4, 2022) previously found that TLTI council breached the Municipal Act by entering a closed-session meeting to vote by consensus on a major internet broadband project and funding application. This instance reinforces the community's belief that expensive infrastructure decisions are routinely hammered out behind closed doors long before the public can weigh in on how their tax dollars are being spent.

Furthermore, these top-down plans have demanded significant public funds for projects that directly impacted residents and they have had no input in that process. This friction was on full display at a tense town hall meeting in Rockport, where community members voiced immense frustration over the "Rockport Urbanization Phase 1" project on Old River Road. Residents argued that the township pushed ahead with costly road resurfacing and concrete curbs without adequately consulting the village, turning a quiet, historic rural route into an unwanted urban design. By executing these major overhauls before seeking genuine input, leadership leaves taxpayers feeling that bureaucratic agendas take priority over authentic community needs.
